

MASS COMMUNICATION THEORY

An Introduction

Third Edition

DENIS McQUAIL

SAGE Publications

London • Thousand Oaks • New Delhi

CONTENTS

PREFACE	xv
1 INTRODUCTION: THE RISE OF MEDIA OF MASS COMMUNICATION	1
The significance of mass media	1
Media and society relationships	2
Basic differences of approach	3
Different kinds of theory	4
Communication science and the study of mass communication	6
Levels of communication	6
Different networks	7
Alternative traditions of analysis: structural, behavioural and cultural	9
Mass communication defined	10
The mass media institution	11
The rise of the media: origins of media definitions	12
Print media	13
The book	13
The early newspaper	13
The press as adversary	14
Rise of a newspaper-reading public	15
The political press	15
The prestige press	15
Commercialization of the newspaper press	16
Film	16
Broadcasting	18
Recorded music	19
New electronic media	20
Inter-media differences	22
Freedom versus control	23
Issues of use and reception	25
Changes in society	26
Internationalization	26
Informatization	26
Rise of postmodern culture	27
Individuation	27
Changes in the media	28
Conclusion: implications for the public interest in media	29
PART I THEORIES	31
2 CONCEPTS AND MODELS	33
Early perspectives on media and society	33

The power of mass media	33
Communication and social change	34
The potential benefits of mass communication	35
The 'mass' concept	35
The mass communication process	36
The mass audience	38
Mass culture and popular culture	39
Definitions and contrasts	40
Dynamics of cultural forms	41
The rise of a dominant paradigm for theory and research	41
A view of the good society	42
Scientific origins	42
Bias of the paradigm	43
Concentration on effects	44
An alternative paradigm	45
A different view of society and media	46
Diverse sources of challenge	46
The status of the alternative paradigm	47
Implications for the study of communication	48
Four models of communication	49
A transmission model	49
A ritual or expressive model	50
Communication as display and attention: a publicity model	51
Encoding and decoding of media discourse: a reception model	53
Comparisons	54
New patterns of information traffic	55
Allocution	56
Conversation	56
Consultation	56
Registration	57
An integrated typology	57
New theoretical perspectives on media and society	58
The information age	59
Postmodernism	59
Conclusion: implications for mass media theory	60
 3 THEORY OF MEDIA AND THEORY OF SOCIETY	 61
Media, society and culture: connections and conflicts	61
A typology of society-culture relations	61
An inconclusive outcome	63
Mass communication as a society-wide process:
the mediation of social relations	64
The mediation concept	65
Mediation metaphors	65
A frame of reference for connecting media with society	66
Types of media-society theory	67
Main issues for theory: power and inequality	69
Main issues for theory: social integration and identity	70
A dual perspective on media	70

Ambivalence about social integration	71
Different types and levels of integrative media effects	73
Mass communication and social change	73
Mass society theory	74
Marxism and mass media	75
The classic position	76
Neo-Marxist variants	76
Functionalist theory of media and society	77
Conceptual basics	78
Specifying the social functions of media	78
Uses and disuses of functionalism	80
Media and social integration	80
Critical political-economic theory	82
Theory of media and development: rise and decline	84
Communication technology determinism	85
The Toronto School	85
Technology and ideology	86
An interactive alternative	86
The information society: new theory of media-society linkages	87
Conceptual underpinnings	87
Logic of change	88
'Videotopia' versus 'dystopia'	89
Progressive or conservative direction?	90
Bias to globalization	91
Conclusion: conflict versus consensus, and media-centric versus society-centric approaches	91
 4 MASS COMMUNICATION AND CULTURE	 94
Setting the scene: the culturalist approach	94
Communication and culture	95
Towards defining culture	95
Research issues	96
The beginnings: the Frankfurt School and critical theory	97
Hegemony	99
Later developments of critical cultural theory:
the Birmingham School	100
Gender and mass media	101
The 'redemption' of the popular	103
The (semiotic) power of the people	103
Links to postmodernism	104
Unanswered questions	105
Commercialization	106
Communication technology and culture	107
McLuhan's view of cultural change	107
A model of technology and cultural change	108
Media logic and the bias of communication	109
Cultivation and the mediation of identity	110
The shifting boundaries of social space	111
Globalization of culture	111

Structural trends towards transnationalization	111
Transnational media flow as a process	112
Globalizing effects: pro and con	113
Concepts of cultural identity	114
Cultural invasion: resistance and subversion	115
Towards a global media culture?	116
Conclusion: time, space and the media	117
PART II STRUCTURES	119
5 NORMATIVE THEORIES OF MEDIA PERFORMANCE	121
Media–society linkages	121
The status of normative theory	122
Varieties of theory for the press and other media:
social responsibility	123
Origins	123
The 1947 US Commission on the Freedom of the Press	124
Media codes of conduct	125
The public broadcasting idea	126
Four Theories of the Press	127
Libertarian theory and press freedom	128
The libertarian ideal	128
Questions about press freedom	129
Freedom of expression and freedom of property	129
Beyond 'theories of the press'	131
Development media theory	131
Democratic-participant media theory	131
Other models	132
Limitations of the press theory approach	132
Media change: new normative theory needed for new times?	133
The concept of a 'public interest' in media	135
Issues for social theory of the media	136
Concentration and monopoly	136
News quality	137
Security and social order	137
Morals and decency	138
Commercialism	138
Cultural issues	138
Response to the issues	139
Principles of structure and performance: an interpretative overview	139
Media freedom	140
Freedom requirements	140
Benefits of media freedom	141
Media equality	142
Media diversity	143
Diversity requirements	144
Benefits of media diversity	144
Information quality	145
The objectivity concept	145
The benefits of objectivity	146

A framework for objectivity research and theory	146
Main information quality requirements	147
Limits of objectivity	148
Social order and solidarity	148
Expectations and norms relating to order	150
Cultural order	150
Cultural quality norms	151
The range of application of normative media theory	152
Conclusion: a changing normative environment	152
6 MEDIA STRUCTURES AND INSTITUTIONS	154
Media 'not just any other business'	154
Alternative perspectives	155
The main issues	155
The basics of media structure and levels of analysis	157
Some economic principles of media structure	158
Different media markets and sources of income	158
Advertising versus consumer revenue — implications	159
Media market reach and diversity	160
Competition for revenue	161
Media cost structures	161
Ownership and control	162
The effects of ownership	163
Competition and concentration	164
Horizontal versus vertical concentration	164
Other types of concentration effect	165
Degrees of concentration	165
Transnationalization	166
Policy issues arising	167
Distinctive features of media economics	168
Dynamics of media structure	169
The regulation of mass media: alternative models	171
The free press model	171
The broadcasting model	171
The common carrier model	172
Inter-country differences: the social and cultural specificity of media systems	173
International communications: structural aspects	175
Multinational media ownership and control	177
International media dependency	178
International media regulation	181
Conclusion	182
PART III ORGANIZATIONS	183
7 THE MEDIA ORGANIZATION IN ITS CONTEXT	185
Issues and perspectives	185
Organizational influences on content	186
Alternative modes of analysis	186
The rise of a research tradition	187

Levels of analysis	188
The media organization in a field of social forces	190
Relations with society	192
Goals of media organizations	192
Internal diversity of purpose	194
The journalist's role: engagement or neutrality?	194
Professionalism	197
Media occupational dilemmas	198
Internal diversity of communicator goals	199
Latent conflicts	199
Characteristics of mass communicators	201
Women in news organizations	203
Pressure and interest groups	205
Relations with owners, clients and suppliers	206
Proprietor influence	206
The influence of advertisers	207
Relations with the audience	209
Hostility to the audience	209
An alternative view	209
Insulation and uncertainty	210
Images of the audience	210
Conclusion	211
 8, THE PRODUCTION OF MEDIA CULTURE	 212
Media-organizational activities: gatekeeping and selecting	212
The gatekeeping concept	213
Ideological versus organizational factors in news selection	213
Alternative approaches to the study of news selection	214
People and selection	215
Location and selection	216
The news net	216
Pre-definitions of news and planned events	217
Time and selection	218
Typification of news by time	218
The question of selection 'bias'	219
Access to the media for society	220
A continuum of media autonomy	220
Actuality content as a contested zone	221
Relations with sources	222
The planning of supply	223
Asymmetrical relationships and assimilation	223
Public relations and news	224
Media-organizational activity: processing and presentation	225
Internal processing of information	226
An alternative model of organizational selection	227
The question of bias again	228
Standardization and organizational logics	229
The logic of media culture	230
Alternative models of decision-making	231
Conclusion: the attention-gaining imperative	232

PART IV	CONTENT	233
9	ISSUES, CONCEPTS AND VARIETIES OF DISCOURSE	235
	Why study media content?	235
	Critical questions and alternative discourses	236
	The cultural text and its meanings	237
	The concept of text	237
	Differential encoding	238
	Open versus closed texts	239
	Narrative	240
	Seriality	240
	Realism	241
	Differential 'reading' of texts	242
	Gendered media texts	243
	Studying the popular	243
	Structuralism and semiology	244
	Towards a science of signs	245
	Connotation and denotation	246
	Uses of semiology	247
	Media content as information	248
	Information theory	248
	Applications in the study of content	249
	The evaluative dimension of information	250
	Media performance discourse	251
	Freedom and independence	252
	Content diversity	253
	Objectivity in news	253
	Reality reflection or distortion?	255
	A critique of the reality-reflection norm	256
	In summary	257
	Critical perspectives on content	258
	Marxist perspectives	258
	Commercialism	259
	On the question of cultural quality	260
	Gender-based critique	261
	Conclusion	262
10	GENRES AND METHODS OF ANALYSIS	263
	Media genres and formats	263
	Defining genre	263
	Two genre examples: western movies and television soap operas	264
	Media format and logic	265
	Media content frames	266
	Visual language	266
	The news genre	267
	What is news?	267
	News and human interest	269
	News values and the structure of news	270
	News bias	271

The form of the news report	272
Storytelling versus factual reporting	273
Two versions of the news sequence	274
Questions of research method	274
Where is meaning?	275
Dominant versus alternative paradigms again	275
Traditional content analysis	276
Basics	276
Limits to content analysis	277
Quantitative and qualitative analysis compared	278
Mixed methods are possible	278
Conclusion	280
PART V AUDIENCES	281
11 THEORY AND RESEARCH TRADITIONS	283
The origin and diversity of audiences	283
Past, present and future of the media audience	284
The rise of a reading public	285
Early conceptualization of the audience as a mass	286
From mass to market	287
The duality of the audience	288
A typology	289
The social group	290
The gratification set	290
Fan group or taste culture	290
Channel or medium audience	291
Comparisons and contrasts	291
Implications of new media for the audience concept	292
End of the audience?	292
Or escape of the audience?	293
Change but not revolution	294
Three traditions of research into audiences	294
The structural tradition of audience measurement	295
The behaviourist tradition	296
The social cultural tradition and reception analysis	297
Questions of audience structure	298
Types of audience	299
Explanations of audience structure and composition	300
Audience formation and flow	301
Audience side factors	302
Medium-side variables	302
A model of the audience-formation process	303
Expectancy-value theory	303
Conclusion: multi-channel futures	305
12 THE SOCIAL CHARACTER OF AUDIENCE EXPERIENCE	307
The audience as an active social group	307
Sociability in media use	308
Social uses of media	308

Normative framing of media use	309
Early critique of media 'addiction'	309
Content-based norms	310
Guilty audiences	311
Attachment and dependence	312
Gendered media use	313
Audience-sender relationships	314
The concept of audience activity	315
Five modes of activity	316
A flawed concept	317
Audience uses and gratifications	318
Basic assumptions	318
Social and psychological origins	318
Revisionism	319
Audience involvement and entertainment	321
Different models for different kinds of content?	322
Audience response and feedback	322
Media-originated feedback	323
Response on behalf of the audience	323
Spontaneous feedback	324
Conclusion	324
PART VI EFFECTS	325
13 PROCESSES OF SHORT-TERM CHANGE	327
The premise of media effect	327
The natural history of media effect research and theory:
four phases	328
Phase 1: all-powerful media	328
Phase 2: theory of powerful media put to the test	329
Phase 3: powerful media rediscovered	330
Phase 4: negotiated media influence	331
Media power can vary with the times	332
Levels and kinds of effect	333
Processes of media effect: a typology	335
Individual response and individual reaction	338
The stimulus-response model	338
Mediating conditions	339
Source-receiver relations and effect	341
A model of behavioural effect	342
Collective reaction effects	344
Panic and rumour	344
Civil disorder	345
Media and terrorism	345
Contagion and imitation	346
The campaign	346
Basic features	346
Filter conditions in campaigns	347
Diversity of campaign effects	348
Reflections on the campaign	349

	Personal influence in campaign situations	350
	Conclusion	351
14	LONGER-TERM AND INDIRECT CHANGE	352
	Diffusion in a development context	352
	The distribution of knowledge	353
	News diffusion and learning from news	353
	Patterns of diffusion	354
	Learning and comprehension	354
	Agenda-setting	356
	Knowledge gaps	357
	Long-term unplanned change: a model	359
	Socialization	360
	Reality defining and constructing	361
	The spiral of silence: the formation of climates of opinion	361
	Structuring reality and unwitting bias	363
	Cultivation	364
	The theory	364
	Testing the theory	365
	Doubts and questions	365
	Social control and consciousness formation	366
	Consensus maintenance: selective attention and omission	367
	The construction of conformity	368
	Media power: who benefits?	369
	Effects on other social institutions	370
	Event outcomes	371
	Media and cultural change	372
	Conclusion	372
15	ENDPIECE: LINES OF DEVELOPMENT	373
	Mass communication endures	373
	The future of theory	373
	The multiple logics of mass communication	377
	Media as a (defective) meaning machine	379
	Domains of meaning	379
	Significance	379
	Reality and real-life contexts	379
	Public versus private space	380
	Identity	380
	Space and location	380
	Time	380
	Power, influence and effect	381
	Do the media have any?	381
	Whose side are the media on?	381
	Fame and celebrity	382
	Questions of culture	383
	Last words	384
	REFERENCES	385
	INDEX	408